A Bearing on Pump Safety

Speedseal's revamped Life raw-water-pump cover for generators and main-engine cooling pumps—with a new outer bearing that's vastly improved the company's popular previous model—provides quick and easy impeller access and has been proven to increase impeller and pump longevity and performance. The addition of a Teflon disc placed between the end of the cover recess and the rotating brass bearing (which is in contact with the impeller) promotes extremely low friction, even when running dry; this is an important emergency safety factor.
